? What's In Season in The Dalles and the Columbia River Gorge

One of the best parts of shopping at a farmers market is experiencing what's truly in season right here in The Dalles and across the Gorge.

While grocery stores make it possible to find almost anything year-round, there's something special about eating with the seasons. Produce that's grown locally and harvested at the right time simply tastes better—more flavor, more nutrients, and a deeper connection to the land around us.

Right now in the Columbia River Gorge, you'll start to see:

- ? Early greens like lettuce, spinach*
- ? Fresh herbs like chives, parsley, and cilantro*
- ? Spring roots like radishes and young carrots*
- ? Early berries beginning to make an appearance*
- ? Edible flowers and specialty greens*

As the season continues, the market will naturally shift—bringing new flavors, colors, and abundance each week.

Join us Saturdays in June-October to get what's fresh, and in season, locally!

Shopping locally means:

- Better flavor (picked at peak ripeness)*
- Supporting local farmers and small businesses*
- Eating in rhythm with the land and seasons*

Next time you're at the market, try picking up something that's in season—you might discover a new favorite.

? Taste the Gorge, one season at a time.

new event

City of Dufur

07:00 AM - 08:00 PM PST

The Dufur Historical Society, 541-467-2205

dufurbhist@ortelco.net

Take a step back in time and experience a slice of country life.

Dufur, a tiny town perched on the edge of the Columbia River Gorge, is a center of dry-land wheat farming that began just after settlers arrived on the Oregon Trail, 175 years ago.

An Entire Day of Activities

On Saturday Aug 8th, the day starts early with a country breakfast served at long picnic tables at the city park. Join us for the Dufur Threshing Bee Parade that winds through Main Street. Then local farmers and ranchers bring out their antique farm equipment to demonstrate harvesting, threshing and more, with locally grown wheat. Visitors can also see steam engines, horse drawn farm equipment and a tractor pull competition at the threshing field.

The town turns out with artisan craft booths, quilt show and yard sales. There's even a petting zoo and tractor parade. Travelers can wander over to the Dufur Historical Society Museum to tour the old one room schoolhouse, log cabin, cookhouse and blacksmith shop.

Later that evening, as the day cools down, families gather on the shady grounds of the historic Balch Hotel for a rustic barbeque dinner and music.

On Sunday, the event shifts gears as Dufur hosts an annual classic car show. Visitors and locals enjoy wandering the City Park, looking at antique refurbished cars from the 30-70's.

The Dufur Threshing Bee is sponsored by the Dufur Historical Society. Located in Wasco County, Dufur, Oregon offers the visitor grand vistas, great outdoor recreation, and a glimpse into another era. Wheat fields and cherry orchards dot the hills that surround the town and provide the largest sweet cherry crop in the world. Visitors enjoy the beauty and bounty of the land, the friendliness of its people, and the sunny, clear skies.
